

Godless Governments – I

August 7, 2021

Without a true God or His personal judgement at death to fear, what is there to stop rulers or ruling elites from exploiting their privileged rank for their own benefit and not that of the people they rule? A modern politician answers to nobody except the media. The media answer to very few people who do not belong to a race lusty for world domination by means of installing their New World Order. But this NWO can only be installed secretly because it will eliminate the last vestiges of Christendom, including all the liberties that derived from Christendom – it is not freedom that gives truth, because of original sin. It is truth that gives freedom (Jn. VIII, 32), it was Christian truth that gave the West its political freedoms, and life, whereas the NWO plans to kill off billions of the world's populations (just as the Covid "vaccines" are starting to do).

Therefore, the world's present godless rulers are bound to pretend they are promoting the peoples' life and liberty when they are in fact preparing their death and enslavement. Here is why politicians are such liars, especially since the French Revolution in 1789, when the West lurched to the left, away from God.

Let these grand accusations be illustrated from recent real life: actions of Her Majesty's Government of Great Britain. On the website of a British nationalist party (patria-uk.org), a British patriot wrote an article which supports Archbishop Vigano's contention in these "Comments" last week, namely that the peoples of the world must stop thinking that their governments are ruling for their benefit. Quite the opposite is true. Here is an edited summary of the first half of Dennis Whiting's article –

"Today, we are not in charge of our own country – we have a government of occupation which creates its own "truth" and spins events in line with a preconceived narrative. Since the year 2000 various disasters have occurred for which the official government explanations are not believable. Notably 9/11, 7/7 and more recently, the Salisbury poisoning. The narratives of these and similar events put out by successive governments and faithfully reported by the media are inconsistent and incoherent.

In 2014, in a speech at the United Nations, UK Prime Minister David Cameron characterised the questioning of official narratives by "conspiracy theorists" as a form of "right-wing terrorism" that needed to be dealt with. Since the onset of Covid-19, the UK government has been frantically countering alternative narratives, setting up bodies such as the Integrity Initiative, and now it is threatening to criminalise any serious search for the truth with the Online Harms Bill. The Behavioural Insights Team was set up in 2010 as an official body answerable to the Cabinet Office. Its function is the psychological management of public perception. SAGE (Scientific Advisory Group for Emergencies) is a similar body set up to advise the Cabinet Office, together with its subgroup SPI-B (Scientific Pandemic Insights Group on Behaviours). In 2020, SPI-B stated that a "substantial number of people still do not feel sufficiently personally threatened [by Covid-19]" and the "perceived level of personal threat needs to be increased among those who are complacent, using hard-hitting emotional messaging" – in other words fear must be ramped up to ensure that the public at large accepts the government's narrative on Covid-19.

Similarly, in the aftermath of the mysterious poisoning of the Scripals in Salisbury in March 2018, the government had some difficulty in making the official narrative stick. So, at the G7 meeting in June of that year, Prime Minister Theresa May announced that "G7 leaders have agreed to establish a new Rapid Response Mechanism." This meant that all the G7 nations would automatically accept the version of such events as given by one of their members, and would react appropriately . . .”

In other words, the leading seven governments of the world promised to unite in their organising of the lies! See these Comments next week for the rest of Whiting’s article.

Kyrie eleison